A group of tourists on a cultural visit to the Theatre of Epidaurus in Greece interrupt with their talking the rehearsal of a play about Aristophanes. The company accepts that they stay to watch the progress of the rehearsal. Little by little the improvised audience, disturbed by what they see on stage, giving instructions and censuring what they consider is incorrect. The conflict between the Dionysian world of Aristophanes and the dictates of the new moral.
During its entire history Joglars has produced Aristophanes' art. It has staged contemporary situations through satire and comedy with the objective of making people reflect on the topics that are addressed. Joglars, the private theatre company with the greatest continuous career in Europe will be celebrating its 60th birthday in 2022 by paying tribute with this new play to Aristophanes, the father of satire and comedy.
