A single mother (Sandrine Kiberlain) and a married man (Vincent Macaigne) begin an affair with the understanding that their relationship is purely sexual and has no future. Against all odds and expectations, they find themselves increasingly drawn into each other's company. After The things we say, the things we do, Mouret offers another playful and beautifully written variation on his wry, ongoing conundrum over love and sex / fidelity and infidelity, which Premiered at the Cannes Film Festival this year.
