Que hablen de mí is Pastora Soler's new tour, and a proclamation of courage and freedom. The singer from Seville, who is considered one of the best voices in Spain, with some of the best live performances, is back with her great songs and new hits, in her words "dressed in emotion from beginning to end. On occasions, the fear of what people will say about you keeps us from being ourselves; not listening to this inner voice that always shouts one's own truth." And now is the time to share it.
In 2020 Pastora Soler celebrated her 25 year-long career. During that time, she published twenty studio albums, and shared projects and the stage with Alejandro Sanz, Raphael, Mónica Naranjo, Armando Manzanero, Malú, David Bustamante, Miguel Poveda and Sergio Dalma, and was awarded numerous awards, including amongst others the prestigious Medal of Andalusia, 2007 Micrófono de Oro given by the Federation of Radio and Television Associations, four Premio Dial, Premio del Senado Mujer 2008 and a nomination for the Latin Grammys.
