All its life, the puppeteer family of Joaquín Gómez-Chacón Carmona has been converting any little space available into a theatre to delight its audience with its traditional numbers. An apparently easy lifestyle, in which the real trick is to reconcile the desires, aspirations and ideologies of a "free" family with the rigid reality of postwar Spain. Because theatre, like life…is no longer what it used to be.
After 15 years working in theatre as an actor, scriptwriter and director of several projects (Cía. El Espeto Feliz, Claqué-Málaga, collaborations with NTM, amongst others) and his work in the musicals Billy Elliot and El jovencito Frankenstein, Manolo Supertramp is now surrounded by his lifetime colleagues to encompass all he has learned with this story of a travelling theatre troupe.
